Types of urban renewal. The heat island effect. Concept of urban housing. The urban heat island.

The modeling covered 182 warm season days from 2006 and 2013, with one-hour timesteps, so the UHII is the sum of  $24 \times 182 = 4,368$  hourly temperature differences. To make the index more intuitive, we divide by 182 and report the result in the last row, labeled "DegHourDay." This quantity is the heat island effect calculated in degree-hours per day (Celsius). Individual Maps and Data Files Download All Data File - maps, census tracts, centroids, shapefiles and other GIS files (Zip File, 254.6 MB) How the Index is Calculated The UHII is calculated by atmospheric modeling, as a temperature differential over time between an urban census tract and nearby upwind rural reference points at a height of two meters above ground level, where people experience heat. Since 2020, the index is also reported in degree-hours per day on a Celsius scale - a measure of heat intensity over time, calculated by dividing the UHII by 182 days. The interactive map also shows this version of the index, on the bottom row, labeled "DegHourDay" when you click on a census tract. Downloading the Map The map requires that you have installed the free Google Earth application. The next-to-last row, labeled "UHII," adds up all the temperature differences every hour for every day over two summers. Add Data Search About User Guide Sign Up Log In This interactive map shows urban heat islands in California as measured by the Urban Heat Island Index. The map legend shows the range of intensity. The Table of Urban Extents that was created from the attribute table of the shapefile above is available in Excel (.xlsx) is also available for download here [6.5 MB]. It will show the 15 data values about the census tract. Urban Heat Island Map (Download KMZ 15 MB) Once the map is open, click on urban areas to view the urban heat island effect by census tract. The urban heat islands are color coded according to their intensity, with green representing the smallest effect and red to white representing the greatest intensity. An increase of one degree over an eight hour period would equal eight degree-hours, as would an increase of two degrees over a four-hour period.
